Fund Manager's Report
Market Review

The fund's NAV decreased by 6.06% but still gained 3.71% year to date. US Treasury yields continued to climb and US dollar strengthened for stronger stimulus and faster vaccine administration in March. Thus, emerging market underperformed developed market. In Hong Kong dollars, S&P 500 Index went up by 4.48% while Hang Seng Index and CSI 300 Index fell by 2.08% and 6.34% respectively in March. As to sectors, Communication Services and Consumption fell the most while Industrials, Utilities and Real Estate performed with positive return.

Market Outlook

The vaccine plan went on well in US, which was beyond expectation. China's March manufacturing PMI shows economy recovery is still on track. However, with the arrival of 1Q21 result period for A shares and H shares, we expect market volatility may become larger. We will continue to optimize the portfolio structure and keep balanced allocation between growth stocks and value stocks. We still favor on growth sectors such as Internet, Pharm, Consumption and Electronics. Some good companies within these sectors are traded with reasonable valuation after the recent selloff. Simultaneously, we focus on the sectors which will benefit from economy recovery including Airlines, Financials and Materials.
