Fund Manager's Report
Market Review

The fund's NAV increased by 2.34% in August and retreated by 2.34% year to date. August was a positive month for equity market. After a challenging month of July, Chinese equities have stabilized. In Hong Kong dollars, the CSI 300 was down 0.04% and the Hang Seng Index down 0.32%, but S&P 500 was up 2.96% in August. As to sectors in Hang Seng Index, Industrials, Consumer Staples and Energy sectors performed with positive return while Utilities and Financials sectors performed with negative return.

Market Outlook

China PMI fell below 50 for the first time since early 2020 in August, indicating economy momentum has slowed. We expect fiscal policy to play a more prominent role in the coming months to support economy growth, especially given that year-to-date government bond issuance has been slower than previous years. Monetary policy could also be moderately relaxed to support small and medium enterprises. Going forward, we will avoid the sectors that are facing regulatory headwinds and adjust portfolio structure. We will keep balanced allocation between growth stocks and value stocks and still favor on quality new economy leaders with reasonable valuation. We focus on policy preferred and domestic demand-related sectors (consumer staples, technology, auto) with stable fundamentals, electricity and energy.
